

Shall We Bival? Use of Bivalirudin for Anticoagulation in Pediatric ECMO

Session Date: 06/22/2021

Session Time: 11:00 – 11:45 AM (CST)

Target Audience

This continuing education (CE) session was planned to meet the needs of professional staff who deal with the selection and monitoring of medication(s) as part of their patient care duties, including pharmacists, RNs, APRNs, PAs, MDs.

Activity Overview

Unfractionated heparin (UFH, heparin) has historically been used for anticoagulation in ECMO in adult and pediatric patients. However, heparin comes with its own limitations, such as the risk of heparin-induced thrombocytopenia and needing to overcome the obstacle of antithrombin deficiency. Bivalirudin is an alternative anticoagulant that garnered attention with its pharmacologic benefits and advantages over heparin demonstrated in adult and pediatric ECMO studies. Research in the use of bivalirudin in pediatric ECMO continues to grow. This presentation will review recent evidence in the use of bivalirudin and its comparison to heparin in pediatric ECMO.

Learning Objectives

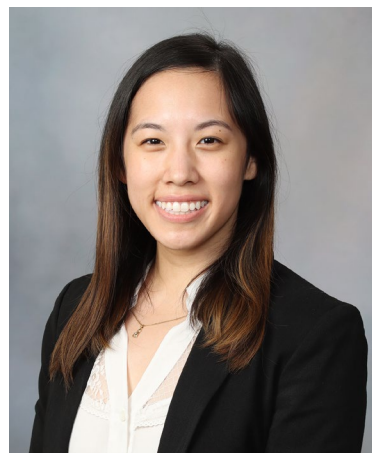

At the conclusion of this knowledge-based CE session, participants should be able to:

1. Describe the utility and importance of anticoagulation in ECMO
2. Identify clinical factors to consider with the use of bivalirudin anticoagulation in ECMO
3. Discuss literature evaluating the use of bivalirudin and its comparison to heparin for anticoagulation in pediatric patients supported on ECMO
