Target Audience

This continuing education (CE) session was planned to meet the needs of professional staff who deal with the selection and monitoring of medication(s) as part of their patient care duties, including: pharmacists, RNs, APRNs, PAs, MDs.

Activity Overview

Benzodiazepines have been established as preferred initial first-line treatment for status epileptics, but are not always efficacious in achieving cessation of seizures. Second-line antiepileptic therapies including fosphenytoin, levetiracetam, valproate, and phenobarbital are utilized for urgent control, but current status epilepticus guidelines do not specify a preferred agent. Recent evidence has provided clarifications regarding preferred urgent control therapies, yet many further questions remain regarding how this evidence can be incorporated into clinical practice.

Learning Objectives

At the conclusion of this knowledge-based CE session, participants should be able to:

1. Report current guideline recommendations and gaps in evidence for the treatment of status epilepticus
2. Interpret recent evidence regarding conventional antiepileptic utilization in status epilepticus
3. List three considerations in applying new evidence for status epilepticus treatment into clinical practice
