Shocking Updates in the Management of Cardiogenic Shock

Session Date: 11/09/2021

Session Time: 11:00 – 11:45 AM (CST)

Target Audience

This continuing education (CE) session was planned to meet the needs of professional staff who deal with the selection and monitoring of medication(s) as part of their patient care duties, including pharmacists, RNs, APRNs, PAs, MDs.

Activity Overview

The 2017 American Heart Association Scientific Statement suggests norepinephrine may be used as a first line treatment option for management of cardiogenic shock. Alternative vasopressor or inotrope therapy should be further individualized based on shock etiology. Historically, acute myocardial infarction has accounted for a majority of cardiogenic shock cases. Recent epidemiologic studies suggest an increase in additional etiologies adding to the complexity of early identification and resuscitation of shock. This presentation will review literature comparing vasopressors, such as norepinephrine, epinephrine, and dopamine, and inotropes, such as dobutamine and milrinone, for the management of cardiogenic shock while discussing the optimal selection of a pharmacotherapy regimen given individual patient characteristics.

Learning Objectives

At the conclusion of this knowledge-based CE session, participants should be able to:

1. Recognize the clinical heterogeneity of cardiogenic shock and its impact on clinical outcomes.
2. Describe current literature assessing vasopressors and inotropes in the management of cardiogenic shock.
3. Determine an optimal pharmacologic regimen for the treatment of cardiogenic shock given individual patient characteristics.
