General Information

COURSE DESCRIPTION

Up to date and practical information on the diagnosis, treatment and prevention of the infectious diseases you see most in your practice!

The field of infectious diseases is rapidly evolving with new diseases, diagnostic modalities, antimicrobial resistance and new paradigms for treatment. This new course combines the essentials of Coccidioidomycosis with an update on how to manage infections encountered in the outpatient setting. This course will utilize lectures, case presentations and interactive discussion to enhance providers knowledge and ability to diagnose, treat and prevent the infections commonly seen in practice. The course will provide updated and essential information for clinicians who encounter coccidioidomycosis in their practice.

FEATURED TOPICS

- Coccidioidomycosis
- Rapid diagnostic tests for infectious diseases
- Differentiating viral and bacterial infections in the office
- Managing common infections in an era of multidrug resistance
- How to use new immunizations
- Measles, MERS, Chikungunya and More – Tools to help you recognize and prevent spread of emerging infections.
- Antimicrobial Stewardship
- What's New in Management of Skin, Soft Tissue and MRSA Infections
- Update on Urinary Tract Infections
- What's New in Infectious Diarrhea?
- Antibiotic Prophylaxis for Primary Care
