General Information

COURSE DESCRIPTION

During the three-day update, faculty members will address the unique needs of female patients and their health care providers. Participants will gain a comprehensive insight into relevant medical problems uniquely found in women, as well as a basic approach to addressing and improving their common health concerns.

COURSE LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Upon completion of this course, participants should be able to:

- Compare new medical treatment options for menopausal symptoms.
- Utilize new pharmacologic treatments for women at an increased risk of breast cancer.
- Assess new pharmacologic options to treat subacute bacterial endocarditis prophylaxis.
- Improve their awareness of new novel anticoagulant options for patients with atrial fibrillation.
- Apply updated guidelines for better pharmacologic management of patients with lipid disorders.
- Describe how improved pharmacologic management of diabetes in women patients can impact musculoskeletal health factors.
- Utilize new guidelines to select appropriate patients who require surgical intervention for hyperparathyroidism.

INTENDED AUDIENCE

This annual course is designed for primary care physicians, general internists, gynecologists, specialists in preventive care and other health care professionals interested in women's health.

DISCLAIMER

Attendance at this Mayo course does not indicate nor guarantee competence or proficiency in the performance of any procedures which may be discussed or taught in this course.
