Dr. Gladys B. Asiedu is a health services researcher focused on translating community insight into measurable improvements in care delivery. At the Kern Center, she translates insights from patients, families, and clinicians into implementation-ready improvements in care delivery, while as Associate Director for Community Outreach and Engagement at the Mayo Clinic Comprehensive Cancer Center, she leads equitable access efforts to advance implementation-ready, community-driven models of care through community partnerships, cancer outreach and research, clinical trial access etc. Her work centers community partnership as core research infrastructure, not an afterthought.
