Dr. Erin Westfall is an Assistant Professor of Family Medicine and Program Director of the Mayo Clinic Family Medicine Residency in Mankato. Her work focuses on advancing health equity and addressing social drivers of health through patient-centered clinical innovation, technology-enabled care, and community-based research. She has led mobile and community-based healthcare outreach for rural and systemically disadvantaged populations, including refugees, immigrants, and people experiencing homelessness. Her research initiatives include the development of a FoodRx program at the Mayo Clinic Health System Mankato–Eastridge Clinic to address food insecurity in the region. Dr. Westfall also serves on several state and national advisory boards focused on equitable healthcare, education, and policy.
